This foyer (residence hall) has a location that, in appearance, is similar to most American University campuses. It has a campus-like atmosphere with landscaping throughout the grounds and a beautiful park just across the street. Individual buildings house students from around the world, with each country housed in its own building. You will have an individual room, which contains a bed, a desk, and a sink. Free Internet and e-mail access. This residence is a "wi-fi" building (access found in common areas). Each room has a direct telephone line with a personal phone number for incoming and outgoing calls, with answering machine. The personal phone number will be given to you upon arrival. Students may bring a laptop computer, provided they bring or buy a high quality electricity adapter for the European electric system. Bed linens are supplied, and bathroom and kitchen facilities are shared. Students are responsible for supplying their own dishes, pots, pans, and silverware. These items can be purchased in France or brought from the U.S. For those who choose not to cook, there are many student restaurants in the vicinity of the foyer. A post office and a medical facility are conveniently located on the grounds. A Métro stop is in front of the building, only three stops from where classes are held. There is also a library where students can do reference work. Students in the foyers usually organize many different sporting activities on their own, and notices are found on bulletin boards. The building has a security system for which students are issued a security card instead of keys for opening locked doors. Coin-operated washing machine facilities are available on site. Rooms are cleaned daily. This foyer is only open to men and women with United States citizenship age 29 or younger.
